Re: Windows XP: EXtra Proprietary

This is an excellent article. But targeting Microsoft directly misses the real target: the environment that cultivates Microsoft. Fixing the environment breaks the pattern in addition to individual perpetrators. It is time that the movement start focusing on principles. A failure of principles has the USA in a lot more trouble than it wants to admit. Capitalism is dangerous when taken to extremes, like anything. Moderate it. Start the transition with the sore thumb of radical capitalism, the Microsoft Monopoly Menace.

"Moderation and such is not the will of almighty Dallah according to profit Ronnie Reagan, peace be with him... Try again for you to hit jackpot, my capitalist friend..."
